Everyone has their own story for why they want to protect their land. In 2013 and 2014 we completed a record number of projects, changing the story for 15 families. These are stories of farm families being able to re-invest in their farms, securing their future; transferring their farms to the next generation; keeping their forests undeveloped and managed sustainably; and having the peace of mind to know it will stay undeveloped – forever.

There were also a record number of outings and events. Getting people out on the land, experiencing and appreciating what we have right in our own back yard, and making connections to nature and memories that will last a life time. This is more important than ever as we embark on our Next Generation of Conservation. Check out our website at www.TugHillTomorrowLandTrust.org for details about the Next Generation Campaign.
